AGED MAN MEETS DEATH WHEELING WOOD TO HIS HOME

Patrick McDonald, 65, Fatally
Injured When Struck
By Auto

DRIVER HELD IN BAIL
John Whyano, Bristol Township, Was Driving Car
Without License

An aged man wheeling a barrow of wood along Buckley street, met his death early Saturday evening, when struck by an automobile.

The victim was Patrick McDonald, 595 Bath street, aged 65 years.

McDonald, who was employed at the new municipal building, Pond and Mulberry streets, was wheeling a barrow of wood to the home of his sister on Bath street, where he resided. It is thought that at the time of the accident that he was resting along the side of the roadway, near rine street.

Seeing the lights of the approaching automobile driven by John Whyano, 23, Bath road, Bristol R. D. No. 1, McDonald became confused, it is presumed, and instead of stepping onto the sidewalk nearest to him, he is said to have walked across the center of the roadway.

Whyano, seeing the barrow, swerved his car toward the center of the street, at just about the time that McDonald stepped out from behind the barrow. Whyano again turned his car but it was too late. The machine struck McDonald and then crashed into a pole.

McDonald was rushed to the Harrison Hospital, but died shortly after, his chest being crushed as well as the ribs on his right side.

Whyano was placed under arrest and found to have been operating the car without a driver's license. He was given a hearing before Justice Lynn, and is held under $2,000 bail to await the action of the coroner.

Whyano is 23 years of age and lives in the township. He is employed as a driver for the Damp Wash Laundry. McDonald had gone from the Municipal Building along Pond street to Walnut, over the new canal bridge and then via Buckley street to his home on Bath street, so as to avoid traffic through the center of the town.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock from the late home of the deceased on Bath street. There will be high mass in St. Mark's Church at 10 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mark's Cemetery.

The deceased is survived by one sister, Katherine, with whom he resided.

St. Ann's Football Eleven Loses 4th Straight Game

Before a crowd of 1000 here yesterday, St. Ann's suffered the fourth straight defeat at the hands of the much stronger and faster team, Olympia, the final score being 26 to 0.

The champions of South Philadelphia clearly outplayed the locals, who showed fine fighting spirit.

Olympia's goal line was threatened several times by the "Salts" but each time a fumble to a bad pass resulted. Haley and Witter starred for the winners, while Dan Greco and Gildardi played good for St. Ann's.

Next week, St. Ann's will tackle the strong Wissahickon eleven.

EXHIBIT POSTPONED

As the annual exhibit of the Needlework Guild has been postponed to November 15th, the members will meet in the Community House as usual tomorrow to sew. The hour for assembling will be two o'clock.

DAUGHTER IS BORN

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Moore, 227 Cleveland street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl, weighing nine pounds, born Thursday.

Travel Club Members Hear Interesting Speaker

The last meeting of the Travel Club, which was held at the home of Mrs. J. E. W. Tracy, on Friday, November 4th, was given over to the consideration of International Current Events.

Mrs. Louis Spring, president, introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Mildred Scott Olmstead, of the International League for Peace and Freedom. After a brief introduction, Mrs. Olmstead took up our relations with Mexico and pointed out how our difficulties over the oil lands arose from a difference between Anglo-Saxon and Spanish law.

Mrs. Olmstead stressed the importance of our relations with Mexico as being the key to our relation with all of Latin America. She then passed on to discussion of Nicaragua and other South American countries, and finally took up the European situation. Throughout her talk she emphasized the need of broadmindedness, and better information on the part of the United States.

A large number of members and guests were present to enjoy this exceedingly interesting speech.

TOMORROW'S CONTEST

(EDITORIAL)

TOMORROW is Election Day throughout Pennsylvania, but in Bristol the interest of the Republican citizenship will center largely on the First Ward.

In none of the other four Republican Wards have any contests been staged against the Republican nominees, duly selected by the members of the party in the Primary.

In the First Ward there is a contest, in which Republicanism and the Primary itself are being challenged.

For the first time in years in this community a man who was a candidate in the Primary, seeking a Republican nomination, has refused to accept the decision of the party whose suffrage he sought.

John F. Smoyer six years ago ran in the Republican primaries for Borough Council and was defeated. Four years ago, as a Republican, he was again a candidate for Borough Council and a tie vote was cast for him and his Republican opponent in the Primary. In the drawing to decide the tie, Smoyer won; and in the subsequent Election he was supported unitedly by the Republicans of the First Ward.

In the middle of his term in Borough Council, which is now expiring, he was a candidate for the nomination for Burgess—again as a Republican—and was defeated.

In the Primary of this year he was a candidate for nomination to Council for another term—again as a Republican—and was defeated.

No one filed nominating petitions for the Democratic nomination for Borough Council in the First Ward, and Smoyer received that nomination, practically by default, when two of the four Democratic voters in the Ward wrote his name in upon the ballot.

Although claiming to be a Republican, and a Republican candidate in the Primary of this year, he refused to withdraw from the Democratic nomination and is now seeking election to Borough Council as a Democrat, against the Republican nominee, Mr. Winter, duly selected in the Primary.

Republicanism and the Primary alike are thus placed on trial.

What the principles of the Republican Party mean to an industrial community such as Bristol has been so clearly set forth by this newspaper and by the Burgess as to need no repetition or emphasis in this final statement before the Election.

What the spirit and the purpose of the Primary mean are matters so clear to the citizenship of this town that they have never been challenged by a Republican within the memory of those who will participate in tomorrow's Election.

What is of even greater significance is the fact that the spirit and the purpose behind this challenge give it no justification whatever.

Smoyer, in his various aspirations for public office, has advanced about every conceivable "issue" in support of his political ambitions; but this time, as a Democrat, he is without anything except certain accusations which were blown out by a court count of the Primary vote, which he himself demanded.

In the Primary, as everyone knows, he ran upon what

LARGE CROWD WITNESSES BAPTISM IN CANAL

Many Spectators Attracted To Public Service Held At
New Canal Bridge

ONE MAN IMMENSED

Five hundred spectators crowded the vicinity of the new bridge across the canal at Beaver street, yesterday afternoon, to witness the baptism of a colored man named Mathew Deans, Bristol, who was baptised by the Rev. Thomas Gibson. The Rev. Gibson was assisted by Deacon John Smith, of the church.

It was the eleventh baptism which the church, started last January, has conducted. The other baptisms have taken place during the early morning hours and never drew any large number of spectators.

Yesterday the crowd sat upon the bridge abutments, stood upon the banks of the canal and climbed to points of advantage on ladders.

The temperature was low and a stiff north wind swept the waters of the canal as Mr. Deans was immersed.

The Credit Memorial Baptist Church was started here last January and the Rev. L. H. Whitte is the pastor.

Funeral Services Wednesday For Late Angelo Spinelli

Funeral service for the late Angelo Spinelli, who died at his home, 600 Wood street, on Saturday, will be held from his late residence on Wednesday at nine a. m. Relatives and friends, and also members of Bucks Lodge, No. 1169, L. O. O. M., and members of the church, are invited to attend the funeral. High mass will take place in St. Ann's Church at 10 o'clock, and burial will be made in St. Mark's Cemetery.

Mr. Spinelli was the husband of the late Mary Spinelli; and is survived by the following children: Frank, Joseph, Richard, Charles, Michael and Lewis Spinelli, of Bristol; Fannie Lavergata, of Brooklyn. Sixteen grandchildren also survive. The deceased was born on August 15, 1861, and lived in Bristol for 45 years.

EDUCATION WEEK TO BE OBSERVED BY SCHOLARS

Scholars to Assist in Acquainting Public With Actual Work

PROGRAM IS OUTLINED

By Thomas M. Juno

To acquaint the public with the actual work of the schools, with their ideals, their achievements and their needs is the purpose of American Education Week, to be observed in the Bristol High School, beginning today, and ending Friday, November 11th.

The reason for the calling of American Education Week is to emphasize the seven cardinal objectives of education which are:

1. Sound health.
2. Worthy home membership.
3. Mastery of the tools, techniques, and spirit of learning.
4. Faithful citizenship.
5. Vocational effectiveness.
6. Wise use of leisure.
7. Ethical character.

By attention to these objectives schools benefit the entire life of society and the life of the child. "What American Education Week means for every child"—Appreciation of his obligation to match the privilege of free schooling with good spirit and hearty endeavor. "What American Education Week means for every teacher"—A new and challenging call to serve the children of this generation and to work on the problem of profession.

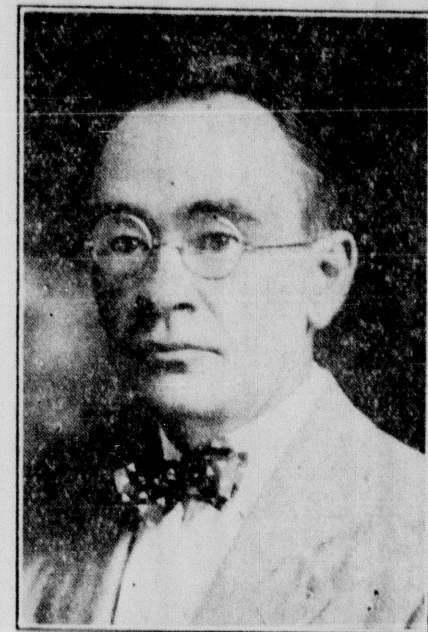

"What American Education Week means for every parent"—Fuller understanding of the great adventure of parenthood; its duties, its privileges, and opportunities, more especially its part in the education of children.

Monday's program, taken charge of by health instructors, Miss Mary Fine and Mr. Kenneth Townsend, and which will be recited before the student body, Junior high and the public, which is cordially invited, is as follows:

Song, "Day by Day the Mauna Kea"; Bible reading by Miss Rachel Bartine; talk, captain of hockey team; song, by Girl Reserves; talk, captain of football team, Dwight Opdyke; song, "Sleep," by school; health play; song, "The Merry Heart," school; talk, Mr. Kenneth L. Townsend; gymnastic relief; song and actions.

Candidates On Republican Ticket

For County Auditor

ALVIN T. LIPPINCOTT
Bensalem Township
Alvin T. Lippincott, of Bensalem, is a Republican candidate for County Auditor.

Mr. Lippincott was educated in the public schools of Bensalem township, and later attended Peirce Business School, Philadelphia. He is at present cashier of the Cornwells State Bank; director and secretary of the Cornwells Building and Loan Association, and a director of the Andalusia Building Association.

He is a member of Washington Camp, No. 539, P. O. S. of A.; Bristol Lodge, No. 25, F. & A. M.; Philadelphia Consistory, Lulu Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; the Craftsman's Club of Andalusia; the Torresdale-Frankford Country Club and Cornwells Fire Co. Mr. Lippincott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lippincott. He married Miss Margaret Buchanan and they have one daughter.

EDUCATIONAL HALL IS CO. SEAT CHURCH GIFT

Donor Is Mrs. William E. Geil,
Of "The Barrens," Doylestown

VERY WELL EQUIPPED

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 7.—With over 200 members of the congregation and invited friends present the handsome and well-appointed educational hall of the First Baptist Church was formally opened when the donor Mrs. William E. Geil, of "The Barrens," presented it as a gift to the church.

Last February at a business meeting of the church the trustees were authorized to go ahead with the plans for the improvement of the basement of the church building that at that time was used for nothing but ordinary basement purposes.

As the improvement now appears, the basement has been transformed into one of the most modern educational halls that any church in this section of the state possesses. The most generous gift has added many thousands of dollars of value to the church plant.

One improvement after another has marked the growth of the First Baptist Church edifice during the sixty years of the existence of the congregation in this borough, until now the church plant equals any in the entire county.

Although the new edition and improvement of the basement is known as an educational hall, the idea of Mrs. Geil, it will be used for recreational and social purposes as well.

The formal presentation last night was in the nature of a fellowship supper. Tables seating eight or ten persons were arranged about the new hall. Beautiful flower decorations were arranged throughout the new addition by Mrs. Kerr.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the church completely equipped the new and up-to-date kitchen connected with one section of the educational hall. The kitchen has been pronounced a model one for church purposes.

In the near future, adjustable roller partitions will be installed in the educational hall making it possible for Junior and senior departments in Bible school work.

With the presentation of the new section of the church the building now has three complete floors in constant use for church work. In the new educational hall it is possible to serve three hundred persons comfortably at meals.

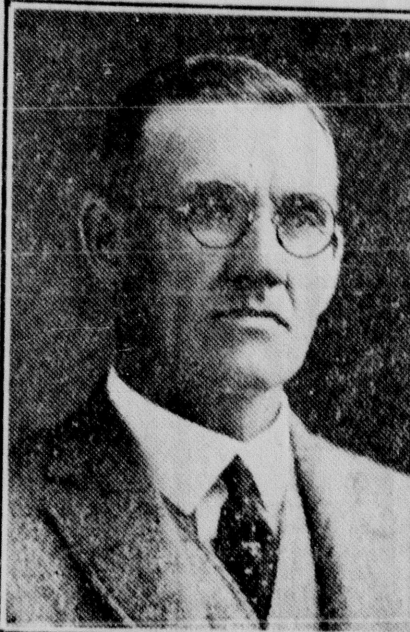

The heating plant of the church has been enlarged with the new addition. A very attractive flooring or a high-grade linoleum has been laid on top of the concrete. Modern retiring rooms equipped with the latest of sanitary furnishings have been provided for men and women.

A unique feature of the heating plant is an auxiliary hot water heater that is in constant operation, thus affording a supply of hot water at any time and heat for the pastor's office and study in the rear of the auditorium floor of the church.

The ceremonies last night were in charge of M. S. Cogan, Deacon, representing the church. There was a host and hostess seated at every table during the fellowship dinner. An orchestra

For County Commissioner

ERNEST H. HARVEY
Langhorne, Pa.

Few men in the county are more widely known or more highly regarded as public officials than County Commissioner Ernest H. Harvey, of Langhorne, who is a candidate on the Republican ticket for re-election.

Years of public service as a township road supervisor in Middletown township when that township was one of the pioneers in road building, as a councilman in Langhorne, putting borough affairs on a sound basis, as county superintendent of state roads in charge of building and maintaining state roads and bridges and finally as County Commissioner have made him known to almost every resident of the county.

It was Mr. Harvey's fine record for efficiency as superintendent of state roads, regarded as one of the best in the State, that made him sought originally as a candidate for County Commissioner. His record since his election has fully justified the confidence placed in him and has caused him to be regarded as one of the county's most valuable public officers.

Few men have served in the Commissioners' board in this county who have been so well qualified to give the public real service in charge of the county's half million dollar business. His integrity, ability, judgment, energy and vision have made him an exceptionally valued official—and his continuance in the board is of unusual importance at this time when there are so many questions of importance to be settled, requiring experienced and capable men.

Long before he became a County Commissioner it was a common experience to hear some one say "See Ernest Harvey; he gets things done." He did, and does, without a great deal of talking. He is not a talker. He makes no wild promises, but goes ahead in a businesslike way and, if what is wanted is feasible and desirable, he does his level best to get the desired result.

With such a record and reputation, the political wise are looking for him to poll one of the largest votes ever given to a candidate in this county.

HEALTH GOAL FOR CO. IS GREATLY ADANCED

More 100% Children During Coming Year Is The Desire

THE LEADERS M. E. T.

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 7.—More 100 per cent. healthy children in Bucks county during the next year was the goal advanced Friday at the first annual meeting of the Bucks County Public Health Association held in the Court House.

Public health leaders, including nurses, physicians, members of boards of health and various health organizations, attended the meeting. They came from every section of Bucks county. Following the meeting a series of health films were shown in the Strand Theatre before the delegates attending the meeting and students of the Doylestown schools.

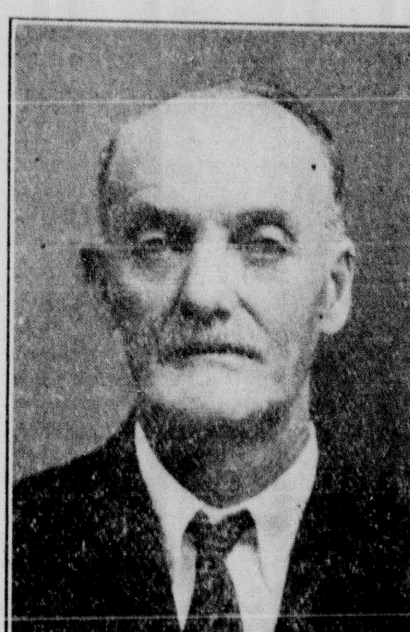

The following officers were elected: President, Miss Laura C. Haines, Doylestown; first vice-president, Mrs. Louis C. Spring, Bristol; second vice-president, Miss Margaret Ely, New Hope; secretary and treasurer, Hiram H. Keller, Doylestown; executive committee, Mrs. Charles Gants, Morrisville; Mrs. Samuel Cressman, Quakertown; Harry Neamond, Perkasie; Harry E. Barndt, Sellersville; Dr. Charles W. Many, Doylestown; Mrs. William R. Mercer, Doylestown; George S. Hotchkiss, Doylestown; Mrs. Henry LeRoy Kister, Doylestown; and Dr. Joseph deB. Abbott, Bristol.

It was announced at the meeting that the following boards of health in Bucks county have become affiliated with the association during the past year: Bristol, Sellersville, Yardley, Doylestown, Langhorne, Chalfont, Richlandtown, Quakertown, Silverdale, New Hope and Ivyland.

In her opening remarks as president and presiding officer, Miss Haines declared that the general public is understanding, more and more, what health authorities are trying to

For County Auditor

HENRY M. KRAMER
Perkasie Borough

H. M. Kramer, of Perkasie, a candidate for County Auditor on the Republican ticket, has been active in public affairs in his home community for a number of years.

Born in Bedminster township, he moved to Hilltown when eighteen years of age and spent a number of years following farming before he moved to Perkasie.

Since moving to that place, however, he has added to his years of public spirited service of eleven years on the School Board of Hilltown, by serving six years as a Councilman in Perkasie. He has also been an active worker in his party, serving six years as a committeeman.

Mr. Kramer has also been active as a churchman in the communities in which he has lived.

BLUE AND GOLD HOLDS NEW HOPE TO A TIE

12-12 Is Result of Football
Battle on Up-County
Field

MANY FANS ATTEND

Bristol A. A. held the New Hope maroons to a 12-12 score yesterday afternoon on the latter's grounds in New Hope, in one of the most bitterly contested games seen for many years.

A fighting Blue and Gold team came from behind in the second quarter, and scored both touchdowns in quick succession, the first one carried over the line by Sackville; the other, the result of an intercepted forward pass by Cook, who raced 25 yards for a touchdown.

New Hope scored their two tallies in the first and last periods, Williams, flashy quarterback, scoring both touchdowns for the up-Countians.

Several hundred enthusiastic fans journeyed to New Hope from Bristol to endeavor to cheer their favorites on to victory, and were keenly disappointed when Bristol failed to win. The high wind and strong sun were the obstacles to overcome on the trick New Hope field, which is planted on a hill.

The team, defending the east goal, was in trouble all the time, the wind carrying the ball down the hill all afternoon. It was over the east goal line that all four touchdowns were scored.

New Hope kicked off, Barton catching the ball on his 19-yard line, where he was downed. A couple of line plays were tried with little success, Barton kicking on the fourth down, the wind carrying the ball right back to Bristol's 20 yard line. New Hope started an offense that scored the first touchdown, Williams going over left tackle. The teams battled in Bristol's territory for the remainder of the period, with the Blue and Gold line holding like soldiers.

The second period was a different story as far as Bristol was concerned, Sackville, Roe and David going in for Barton, Lawler and Rogers. An attack was started with the wind and it was only in Bristol's favor and it was only a matter of minutes before Sackville went through centre for the touchdown that evened the score. A few minutes later Cook intercepted a pass and raced 25 yards for Bristol's second touchdown. Cook failed in both attempts for the extra point.

Frank Cook, who played a wonderful game, made "Rudy" Hartman, New Hope tackle, look so bad in every play, that the Maroon, infuriated, rushed after the little end and deliberately knocked Cook out with a vicious swing behind the ear. Cook had to be rushed to a doctor to be revived, Hartman going out of the game for his cowardly attack. Weissblatt took Cook's place in the line-up and played a nice game.

The third quarter saw New Hope play hard football, stung by the taunts of the crowd who resented the uncalculated attack on the plucky little end. The Maroons crashed through Bristol's defense and evened the score. Williams again scoring, but Naylor failed to catch the pass for the extra point. The teams battled hard in New

CAPTAIN O'HAY TO SPEAK AT BANQUET OF BRACKEN POST

Noted Orator Will Address
Gathering Here, Armistice
Night

HAS BIG REPUTATION

Speaker Described As Being
One Selected for Richard
Harding Davis' Book

Captain Irving O'Hay, U. S. A., retired, humorist, traveler and thinker, is to be the speaker at the Armistice Night banquet to be held in St. Mark's Hall, under the auspices of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion.

Captain O'Hay is one of the men upon whom Richard Harding Davis based his composite character for his "Soldier of Fortune."

O'Hay is said to be without doubt one of the most unique individuals before the public. He has a weird sense of humor, a homely philosophy, and a sound sense of logic. These together with his experience in various armies and "near armies" all over the world and his other varied occupations make him one of the best after dinner speakers now appearing before the public.

To listen to O'Hay's narrative is like having Dumas "D'Artagnan" step out from the pages of the book, "The Three Musketeers," and hold converse with you.

Irvin Cobb describes Captain O'Hay as a "Connoisseur of Wars," he having served in:

Cuba, 1897, Insurrectos under Maximiliano Gomez; Cuba, 1898, Roosevelt's Rough Riders; South Africa, Boer War, 1899-1902, 1st Barbant's Horse, Colonial Cavalry; Balkans, 1905, Foreign Legion of the Serbian Army; Honduras, 1907, Revolutionary forces under Lopez; Nicaragua, 1907, Revolutionary forces under Zelaya; Mexico, 1910, Revolutionary forces under Madero; France, 1914-15-16, P. P. C. L. I., "Princess Pats;" France, enlisted as private in 1917 U. S. Army (regular) retired as captain 1920.

Captain O'Hay's physique is a revelation to those who have led a sedentary life and is a great example of the benefits of moderation, and above all of an outdoor life.

He is the embodiment of all youthful dreams of romance and adventure, and as such, comes highly recommended.

Other speakers at the Legion banquet are to be the Rev. Joseph L. N. Wolf, pastor, St. Barnabas' Church, Philadelphia, who was state chaplain of the American Legion last year and who was with the 25th Division overseas. Rev. Wolf will also participate in the exercises to be held Friday morning at the time of the burial of the French soil taken from the graves of the three Bristol boys now buried in France.

Eugene A. Barrett, who went to France with the American Legion as a representative of the Knights of Columbus, will be another speaker. He will review his visit abroad.

The Legion has invited members of Borough Council to the banquet as guests of Robert Bracken Post.

Ray Smith, commander of the Legion, will talk on the subject, "The Legion As It Is Today." I. J. Hetherington will take as his topic, "Dreams."

Robert Downing will act as the toastmaster of the occasion.

Members of the Legion and their friends, members of the Auxiliary, Rotary Club and Exchange Club and their wives are privileged to attend the banquet. Reservations should be made at once by communicating with Ralph Scheffey, 544 Swain street.

PROMINENT CROYDON MEN ENGAGE IN ALTERCATION

Affair Took Place, It Is Said,
At Third Avenue And State Road

BOTH GO TO HOSPITAL

Last night at 10:30, at Third avenue and State Road, Croydon, Ray Satler and Thomas Lever, both of Bristol Township, are alleged to have become involved in an altercation.

Both men were taken to the Harrison Hospital where they were treated for the injuries sustained. Lever was later discharged from the institution and was given a hearing before Justice Walmsley, who held him in $1,000 bail to await the outcome of Satler's injuries.

Satler is still confined to the Harrison Hospital with a fractured left ankle.

Lever sustained laceration and contused wound of the back of his head, one stitch required; contused wound of each ear and a sprained wrist.

BANKS TO CLOSE

DEMOCRACY HAS NOT FAILED

New York City a few days ago witnessed the strange spectacle of a citizen of democratic America debating the affirmative side and a citizen of monarchistic England debating the negative side of the question "Is Democracy a Failure?"

Dr. Will Durant, author of "The Story of Philosophy" and a recognized authority on philosophy and literature, maintained that democracy, conceived as a government of, by and for the people, is a failure. Dr. Bertrand Russell, English philosopher and scientist, took the position that democracy, even in its present imperfect state, is the best form of government yet evolved because it promotes education of the masses, minimizes social injustices and cruelties, and is most stable.

The debaters were not so far apart as at first seems. They agree on fundamental facts and the only reason they disagree at all is because the viewpoint of Doctor Durant is pessimistic while that of Russell is optimistic.

It is true, as the American author contends, that, under existing democracies, educated people are often disqualified from holding public office, the government is clumsy and wasteful and the people only think they are self-governing. But because man has failed to erect a perfect democracy does not condemn it as a form of government. Durant charges to democracy the shortcomings of man. And he makes the mistake of accepting the republican, or representative, form of government of the United States as a true democracy. Many of the evils of our representative form of government could not exist under a true democratic government.

Since democratic government means government of, by and for the people, democracy can never attain perfection until the great mass of people under it rise to a common level far higher than that now prevailing. Democracy must fail where people are mentally and morally unfit to govern themselves.

THE CRISIS IN ECONOMY

President Coolidge, the budget bureau and Chairman Madden, of the house appropriations committee, are in agreement upon at least one score. They—individually and collectively—look upon the extraordinary demands of a legitimate nature upon the United States treasury as a spur to greater economy. Their reasoning is sound.

When congress convenes next month among the appropriations upon which it will be called to pass will be those for naval construction, flood relief, farm relief, irrigation and power development, inland waterways, and federal building construction. The money involved to meet these demands would more than consume the treasury surplus and the expectant increase in federal revenue.

The position taken by the president, budget bureau and Chairman Madden is that the real need for some of these things should persuade congress to pare other appropriations to the bone that money may be available for the emergency uses. There is as little need for some of the things now draining the public treasury as the need is great for some of the things now denied that aid.

Coolidge economy is facing its greatest test. Whether it will stand the test depends upon congress and the people.

Permanent waves are fine in hair, but not so good in streets.

Echoes of the Past

Items of Interest as Gleaned from old files of Bucks County Newspapers

In the issue of the Newtown Enterprise, dated October 22, 1892, the following items appeared:

From the effects of a stroke of paralysis, suffered a few days previous to this publication, Edward Leedom, a well-known resident of Bristol, died at his home. The deceased was 67 years of age. Funeral services for the late Mr. Leedom, who was survived by his wife and four children, took place on October 21, and burial was made in the Friends' burying ground, Bristol.

The Penn Valley schools conducted special exercises on Columbus Day of that year, the public being invited to attend.

Fire razed the portable saw mill of Addison A. Danzer, of Yardley, during the week of said publication date. The mill was located near the New Jersey Asylum, and burned to the ground. Fire was thought to have been of incendiary origin.

In the issue dated October 29, 1892, these items appeared:

John Ford, an employee of the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens, was killed by one of the large elks on Monday, according to this old copy of the Enterprise. He was badly mangled and torn by the sharp antlers of the animal, the report added.

On the third Saturday evening during the month in which this copy of the Enterprise in question was published, a prohibition mass meeting was held at Langhorne. The meeting took place in the I. O. O. F. hall of that borough, which had been decorated with flags, bunting, etc. Mrs. T. P. Newberry presided in the absence of Mrs. C. S. Holcomb, the county president. Many supporters of the cause were present from Solebury, Wrightstown, Makefield, Newtown and Langhorne. The Newtown Prohibition Quartette rendered selections, and a talk was given by Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, of Indiana. Woman suffrage was alluded to as an important factor in helping in the good cause.

It was stated in the issue of the Enterprise referred to that a large audience greeted Chauncey M. Depew at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on the previous Wednesday evening. "The great orator was never and he kept his audience cheering and laughing."

Quoting from a paragraph appearing in said issue of the Enterprise: "Work on the George School is progressing finely. The artesian well is completed; it is down 110 feet, and in it there is standing water 54 feet deep. Several stonecutters have gone to work, and the laying of the foundation walls was to commence on Friday morning, the 28th. About 1½ acres of timber were cut off to make more room for the northern extension of the main building, and there was received therefore $30 for logs and $80 for fire wood.

On Saturday, October 22, of that year, there was a birthday reunion of the relatives and friends of Dr. Howard A. Hellyer, at Penn's Park. About 80 people were present and a pleasant time was enjoyed. The doctor was presented with a nice chair.

A daughter of Raymond Buseman, of Bristol, had secured a position in the Philadelphia mint, taking the place of Miss Ollie Highland, also of Bristol, who had resigned.

An overloaded freight car had broken an axle on the Bound Brook railroad, near Langhorne the previous Saturday. One car was thrown from the track and several others derailed. One car, containing two men and a horse, the latter being consigned to a party in Trenton, was thrown on the adjoining track. Just after the car had been derailed, an engine running in the opposite direction struck and "THE FIRST AUTO," with Barney Oldfield and Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

In 1896 Bob, son of Hank Armstrong, a horse fancier, is secretly inventing gasoline engines and openly courting Rose Robbins. Hank, discovering Bob's interest in automobiles, horsechips him. Rose intervenes but Bob leaves home. She promises to wait for him. Steve Bentley proposes to Rose and is refused. Bob returns as an automobile racer. In revenge Steve suggests to Hank, who does not know that the "Red Demon" racer is his son, that sulphur in the gas tank will cause an explosion. That night Hank follows Steve's suggestion. All the town gathers to see Bob race.

"No No!" he shrieked. "We must not be too late."

He rushed past the girl blindly groping for some means, some method whereby he might save his boy—his own son, whom he had so unwittingly set in the very path of danger—even death. He looked about him wildly. Where to turn? What to do? His head reeled. He took a firm grip on himself. He must pull himself together. Do everything in his power to avert the disaster he saw staring him in the face.

"God!" he prayed, silently. "Oh, my God! What shall I do? What shall I do?"

Rose hurried after the man, watching him curiously. She had never expected to see Hank so excited. He was frantic. But she thought his excitement was caused by the desire to see his son win a race, and his frenzy by the anxiety to be there in time, so that he might not miss a moment of his boy's triumph.

"Forty-two miles an hour!"

As if in answer to his prayer Hank turned towards Bright Eyes' stall. There stood the mare, placidly gazing on the stirring scene before her. He quickened into action, as he had in the old days when he faced a crisis.

"Bright Eyes will take us," he called to Rose, "and she'll run of the race of her life!"

Rose laughed happily. Of course, there was Bright Eyes and the buggy, and with a little hurried driving they should be able to make the track in time. But she had not realized how swiftly the minutes were passing, and that at that moment Bob was making ready to get into his car and start his perhaps fatal race.

But Hank was opening the stall door, and Bright Eyes stepped out, bending her head to allow the halter to slip over, and taking the bit in her teeth. Hank backed the mare into the long-unused buggy shafts, threw the lines over the buckboard, tightened the girth and jumped in, Rose right behind him. He gathered up the reins and slapped the horse smartly. Out the stable door and into the road they rattled. It was the start of a second race that afternoon against time.

CHAPTER XXII

Bob was gathering speed now, flying round and round the track dizzily. Past the grandstand amid a loud clamor of shrieks and shouts. Round the curve, taking it on two wheels. Straightening out down the stretch. Round the next curve. Past the Judges' stand again. On and on in a mad whirlwind of whizzing wheels and whirling motor. Smell of scorching rubber. Sound of throbbing engines. Swish! Cutting the air.

The race had just begun when Steve Bentley parked his automobile in the field and made for the grand stand. He pushed through the crowd to his seat and got out his field glasses. Adjusting them, he began following the moving red outline of Bob's car. He saw the effort Bob was making to attain speed, and he smiled with satisfaction, knowing that now no one could stop the race unless Bob were flagged down from the Judges' stand. And that wasn't likely to happen. There could be no reason for stopping the race.

He knew that he had left Rose, all innocent of the fate in store for her lover, alone and unable to make her way to the race track, insofar as he knew Hank was nowhere around, and Rose wouldn't be able to tell the horseman that his son was driving. And so long as the situation remained thus there was nothing to deter the working out of Steve's plan. What he didn't know, however, was that Rose had found that this was Bob's race, and the two were now madly streaking it cross country, one hoping to see the start of the race, the other hoping to save a life.

Another round, and the car roared past the grand stand again. The clockers were watching their timing pieces intently. The crowds gazed anxiously for the first news of the speed race, straining their ears to hear the call that they knew was forthcoming. At last one of the judges whispered in the Mayor's ear. The Mayor raised his voice and screamed his message across the track to the waiting populace.

"Forty-two miles an hour!" he shouted. "Forty-two miles an hour!" The front rows tossed their news back. "Forty-two miles an hour!" From tier to tier the cry sounded and resounded.

People screamed with excitement. They pounded each other madly on the back; shook hands; jumped up and down; banged their hats on the benches. A woman fainted. Other women clustered round, offering cut glass and colored glass vials of smelling salts.

The woman was finally restored to consciousness and rushed to move from her place. There wasn't a person who would miss seeing the complete race now.

The rail-birds were frantic in their demonstrations. Bets were being laid as to how fast the machine would go—and could go. Some reckless souls even wagered that the speed demon might get up to seventy-five miles an hour. Some spoke with bated breath of the already established seventy-two miles an hour record. Some frankly avowed that all such stories were pure fabrications and that no machine could ever attain such speed. Of course, Dave Doolittle was one of this last group.

"I don't believe it," he gasped, when the rate of speed was announced. "It ain't got that fast!"

The same spirit of doubt and pessimism shook him as it had when Hank raced his horses.

But no one paid any attention to his remarks, as usual. They were all watching Bob now. And Bob was intent on the track ahead of him. He knew that he would be making sixty soon, and his nerves must be sure and stand under the strain. But he was certain of himself. He could not fail now. Not in his own home town, with his sweetheart looking proudly on, and his father, perhaps, being convinced of the feasibility of auto racing and the power of the engine he had once cried down.

Steve's eyes were still glued on the flying machine. It had a fascination for him that was greater than any he had ever known. He watched carefully every move on Bob's part that might suggest that the speedster was going to quit before he had made a record. He'd quit soon enough, thought Steve grimly. But in a little different way from that which he expected. He wondered whether Rose was trying to walk the two miles to the track. "Idiot! If she hadn't been such a fool about Bob, trying to get his father there, she might have been on the grand stand in full view of the entire affair."

But now Bob was turning to his mechanic. The crowd leaned forward, as though trying to catch the racer's words. They could hear nothing but the beat of the engine and the whizzing, throbbing sounds of the body cutting the air. But they did see the mechanic's move. He leaned around, gripping the side of the automobile carefully, and turned something. Word was being passed now that the reserve gasoline tank was being pressed into service, and the excitement reached its greatest height.

"Turn on the reserve gasoline tank!" Bob had screamed in the mechanic's ear, his voice hoarse, his throat parched from the dust, noticing that his supply was a little low. And as the contents of the new tank began to stream into the engine the machine took a new lease on life and shot away.

Steve lowered his glasses. The strain was over, now, so far as he was concerned. There wasn't a soul who could stop the figure fleeing straight into the arms of destruction. It would only be a matter of minutes—a flash in the span of time. And then—Steve grinned maliciously. All his long-cherished plans would come to be realized. Rose would be his without further struggle. Life would run smoothly, its currents no longer crossing and becoming entangled.

BE HONEST WITH PROHIBITION

Pithy Arguments by Rev. George H. Felts, of Watertown, New York

Be Honest in Logic: Prohibition is no more the cause of bootlegging than the seal on a banknote is the cause of counterfeiting.

Be Honest in Theory: Light wines and beer will no more cause observance of law than permission to sell all liquors caused obedience to former laws.

Be Honest in Facts: You have seen less drunkenness in public during the past five years than you saw during any equal previous period.

Be Honest in Judgment: Prohibition no more interferes with proper medicinal use of alcohol than the prohibition of narcotics interferes with their medicinal use.

Be Honest in Observation: For each adverse effect of prohibition you see, you can find manifold benefits if you will look for them.

Be Honest in Opinion: Personal expressions against the law does as much to encourage lawlessness as personal approval of Germany encouraged disloyalty.

Be Honest in Humor: Jokes that hold prohibition up for ridicule do more to breed contempt than the wild arguments of the wets.

Be Honest in Mind: To believe only reports against prohibition and to reject all reports which are favorable manifests a bias of mind incapable of seeing the facts.—(Adv.)

Mrs. J. Stewart Woodruff, of 235 Madison street.

—Mrs. Roland Richmond, of Frankford, was a guest during last week of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parr, of Madison street.

—Miss Marion Hendricks, of 611 Cedar street, entertained at cards at her home last week. The game of "500" was played and three tables were arranged. ## State News

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7 (I.N.S.)—Four baths in nine years of married life are hardly sufficient for a husband, and constitute ample grounds for a divorce, Judge Arnold Foster held here in granting Mrs. Mary J. Becker her freedom from Charles Becker.

Mrs. Becker further testified that friend husband often insisted on sleeping with his dogs, too.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 7 (I.N.S.)—Winifred M. Forbes, of State College, a co-ed, holds the highest grades in the senior class at Pennsylvania State College, according to the official grade list, made public by Registrar W. S. Hoffman.

The highest grade in the College was made by John D. Hartman, of Mahanoy City, a sophomore, with 2.95, perfect being 3. Miss Forbes rated 2.84.

John Ruzicka, of Palmerton, headed the junior class, while Hartman headed the sophomores.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7 (I.N.S.)—Disliking to use his own name when he deposited $2,000 in a local bank after a profitable business deal, Rabbi Louis Lewis, of Steelton, found himself in difficulties when he tried to withdraw his deposit.

He placed the money in the bank to the credit of "Jacob Jacobson," and had to take the matter to Dauphin County court to get it back. Rabbi Lewis formerly lived in San Francisco.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7 (I.N.S.)—Prohibition has reduced him from a multimillionaire to a man of very moderate means, and as such he can't afford to pay his estranged wife $350 alimony a month. Frederick J. Poth told the Domestic Relations court here.

Poth invested his riches in breweries shortly after prohibition came in, in the hope that the saloons would stage a comeback.

On the other hand, Mrs. Poth told the court that reduction in alimony would compel her to live on a scale which she felt was beneath her. Besides, she said, she is forced to support their children with part of the $350.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Nov. 7 (I.N.S.)—Emory G. Erdman, of Shamokin, formerly assistant division engineer of the Susquehanna Collieries company, has been advanced to the position of division engineer, it was announced at the local offices of the huge corporation.

Erdman succeeds William B. Geise, who was recently promoted to the position of superintendent of the Shamokin division of the company, replacing David V. Randall, who was made general superintendent, with headquarters at Wilkes-Barre.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 7 (I.N.S.)—"Is this the customs office?" asked a voice over the phone here.

H. W. Morris, deputy collector in charge of the Erie customs office, answered the call, and assured the caller it was.

"Can you send some Halloween costumes over to my house?" asked a feminine voice.

Would he purchasers make the same mistake every year, Morris said.

Chief McGuckin Finds Stolen Soap Was Sold

Chief of Police John J. McGuckin has traced the 705 cases of "Sweet-heart" soap which was stolen from the local plant of the Manhattan Soap Company, previous to last Monday morning, when the Chief and three of his officers halted a trio driving a motor truck loaded with the second load of soap to be stolen from the plant here.

The first load of soap was successfully gotten from the plant and taken to Philadelphia. The truck was stored in a garage there and the next day a group of men returned to the garage and transferred the soap to a smaller truck and carted it away.

Chief McGuckin in conjunction with Philadelphia detectives has been working on the case for a week and learned that the soap was auctioned to several different purchasers. The auctioneer sold it for $4.25 a case when the regular price was about $4.75.

Official notice has been served upon the auctioneer that he must show a regular bill of sale for the soap, which he acknowledges selling, not later than today or he will be called to account.

LEAVES FOR ILLINOIS

W. Harry King, Bath Road, has just returned from Springfield, Massachusetts, and leaves today for Belleville, Illinois.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

Puritans of old, with plumes aye, need to envision witches, flying through the air on broomsticks—but Puritans of a modern day watched modern sorcery fly and never bothered about it, except when the shadows of the flyers crossed their paths.

This strange occurrence happened during the filming of Lillian Gish's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "The Scarlet Letter." While staid Puritans marched in a procession to church in the picture, army aviators from Clover Field, near the studios, circled overhead in maneuvers. So used were the screen actors to airplanes above that none paused except when a shadow threatened to interfere with photography. The only one at all interested was Karl Dane, a former aviation officer in the Danish army—and he watched the maneuvers with glee.

Miss Gish plays the tragic heroine, "Hester Prynne," in the new picture, filmed from Nathaniel Hawthorne's classic romance, and which comes to tonight to the Riverside Theatre. Victor Seastrom directed the play, with Lars Hanson, the Swedish star, as leading man and a cast that includes Henry B. Walthall, Karl Dane, William H. Tooker, Marcelle Corday and others of note.

MANY AT SUPPER

Upwards of 600 people were served at the annual chicken supper given by the William Penn Fire Company, at Hulmeville, on Saturday evening. This supper, which is always looked forward to with pleasure by those who usually partake, was attended by residents of many sections of Bucks County. A neat sum was realized.

Blue and Gold Holds New Hope To A Tie

Hope territory for the remainder of the game with neither team showing any superior strength. Bristol failed to win in the closing minutes when a pass from David to Roe was incompletely behind the goal line. Final score, 12-12.

The outstanding players were: "Al" Bauer, who was invincible; Corrigan, Vandegrift and Fine also played the best that was in them; Bud David and Eddie Roe, who form a nice forward passing combination, with Smith, Logan, Gregorsky, Rogers, Coyle and Sackville also starring.

Barton, Lippincott, Lawler, Dugan, Johnson, Weissblatt and Fogley proved that Bristol has reserve strength that is not to be sneered at. Line-up:

Substitutions: Bristol—Roe for Lawler, Smith for Logan, Gregorsky for Johnson, Sackville for Barton, David for Coyle, Dugan for Fine, Weissblatt for Cook, Lippincott for Gregorsky, New Hope—Marro for R. Hartman, Funk for Matthews, E. Naylor for Schmutz.
Touchdowns: Williams, 2; Sackville, 1; Fine, 1.
Point after touchdown: None.
Officials: Ruff Connell, referee; umpire, Work Lakehurst Naval Air Station; head linesman, Pearson, Bristol. Time of quarters, 14 minutes.

COMMUNICATION

Hastings, Florida.

October 28, 1927.

The Bristol Courier.

Sirs:

In reading an article in the Courier of October 25th, 1927, on Phila-New York Highway, someone has been wrongly informed in regard to parts of the dirt roads being in Maine and Florida. I do not know as to the condition of the Maine roads, but on U. S. No. 1, in the State of Florida, there are very few if any dirt roads on that route. Most of the dirt roads are in South Carolina and Georgia, south of Philadelphia, as I drove the U. S. No. 1 route from Maryland to Hastings in August last. Except between Augusta, Georgia, and Baxley, Georgia, the road was being graded on that part of the route then.

I expect that by this time the road through Virginia is completed to the North Carolina line. If so, there is now a continuous hard surfaced highway from the North to the South Carolina line, and quite some miles in Georgia and South Carolina. Both States are rushing the work of hard surfacing the balance of their roads.

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) W. H. WILDMAN.

Health Goal For County Is Greatly Advanced

do, and the parents of young children are ready and willing to listen to the advice of our community nurses, which is as it should be—"See Your Physician."

"We are fortunate indeed," continued Miss Haines, "to have our wonderfully organized Red Cross rural work and to see how the children enjoy their instruction and respond to it."

Miss Haines expressed the appreciation of the association for the educational publicity that has been given so generously by the Bristol Courier.

Dr. J. Fred Wagner, of Bristol, was called upon as the first speaker. Child health was dwelt upon by the Bristol physician. He called attention to the fact that the healthy baby problem does not only begin at the time of birth but early in the life of the parents of the child.

Feeding, regularity and obedience were outstanding points stressed by Dr. Wagner as being vitally necessary in the development of 100 per cent. children. He declared that it is up to the parents to carry out these three things.

"Regularity in feeding, bathing and sleeping is absolutely necessary," declared Dr. Wagner.

A challenge to parents was issued by Dr. Wagner when he said: "If there is anything in the world that will harm a child's life, it is the lack of obedience on the part of the child and the failure of the parent to teach obedience from the very start. It is a sign of weakness on the part of the parent when that parent declares that the baby cannot be mastered."

After regularity, Dr. Wagner continued, make the child know that obedience is the principal thing. The speaker also said that the trend of work of the up-to-date physician is to prevent you from contracting diseases and not only to make you well.

Parents were urged to isolate sick children from the start and to keep the sick child in bed, keeping the child away from the rest of the family.

"Parents have a distinct responsibility toward the child," Dr. Wagner continued, "in looking after the little things that are really the important things. Take care of the acute infections in childhood. If your child is healthy and perfect, do not be satisfied."

Educational Hall Is Co. Seat Church Gift

tra and male quartet furnished music. Stanley Cogan, chairman of the Board of Trustees, reviewed the history of the construction of the church and especially the new educational hall that was started last February.

Mrs. William E. Geil, the donor of the new hall, then responded to Mr. Cogan's remarks and briefly outlined the purposes of the new addition, making it impressive that it was for educational purposes primarily and for recreational and social functions too. She told of the pleasure she experienced in planning the hall. In answer to Mrs. Geil, Stanley Cogan, as chairman of the Board of Trustees, accepted the fine gift.

During the evening Mrs. Geil was presented with a copy of resolutions expressing the appreciation of the congregation for her munificent gift. The resolutions were read by Mrs. Emma Layman, church clerk.

Representing the Ladies' Auxiliary of the church, Mrs. Anson Walton, presented the kitchen equipment and spoke of the pleasure experienced by the members in making it possible for this valued addition to the church plant.

A brief address was made by Miss Margaret Clemens, superintendent of the Junior department of the Bible school, whose class will occupy part of the new educational hall.

Rev. Eaton B. Freeman, who was recently elected pastor of the congregation after a very successful pastorate in LaGrange, Ill., preceded the dedication prayer made by him, with a short address. He outlined a three-fold objective for the young folks in speaking of the new educational hall as follows: "To lead young people to Christ, to develop them in Christ, and to send them out for Christ, which takes in three divisions, knowledge, experience and service."

Following the fellowship dinner there was a social hour and inspection of the new addition. The committee in charge of last night's affair was composed of Rev. Eaton B. Freeman, chairman, Eugene S. Shuman, William Stevens and Miss Elizabeth Knight. The Ladies' Auxiliary served the dinner.

Dr. Charles W. Many, of Doylestown, Bucks county health officer, also stressed the point concerning parent co-operation with the health program as outlined and suggested by the workers.

"Parent co-operation alone will help to decrease the death rate in Bucks county among children," declared Dr. Many.

Dr. John N. Rich, of Doylestown, spoke highly of the excellent work being accomplished along health improvement through the health centers, child welfare clinics and other divisions. He highly recommended the various immunization processes for contagious diseases.

"There is no such thing as the usual children's diseases," declared Dr. Rich. "It is a sad state of affairs when a mother makes the remark that her children just had the usual children's diseases. All is preventable."

"Many an adult today is lying sick at home because the disease started back in childhood days with the measles or some other minor infectious disease that could have been prevented."

"It is far better to have recorded on the physician's card in his office, that the child is one of regular health rather than one with the regular children's diseases."

Tomorrow's Contest

was termed the fire defense issue, claiming that the voters would support his position four to one if given the opportunity to vote upon the subject.

The Primary afforded that opportunity; Smoyer proclaimed that it was the one outstanding issue; he based his Republican candidacy wholly upon it; and he was defeated. The court count changed two errors made by the Election Board in one precinct, but he remained defeated.

In coming out on the fluke Democratic nomination which he received he has entirely abandoned the fire defense issue, which was all-important less than two months ago, and now talks only of frauds that he asserts were perpetrated in the Primary in the First Ward.

The charge of fraud has always been Smoyer's final resort in a political campaign.

Some years ago he cried fraud against the re-assessment of the real estate values of the community. When it was shown that the re-assessment was merely for the purpose of effecting a more equitable distribution of the tax burden, he maintained the same cry, but turned it against the tax rate, and claimed that the re-assessment was the basis of a mysterious "tax grab" that was to be made.

When it was proved that the re-assessment had in reality effected a reduction of the tax rate for more than 80% of the community, he was compelled to concede the fact, but had the effrontery to try to excuse his own false accusations by saying that but for him there would have been some sort of a "tax grab."

When the fire defense question was finally settled by Borough Council and the Burgess, after five or six months of public hearings, in which the most expert and experienced judgment was sought upon every phase of the question, Smoyer had the hardihood to cry fraud against the manner in which the members of Borough Council had exercised a judgment different from his own, and it was then that he declared that the voters would reject the decision of Borough Council four to one, if given an opportunity to vote upon the matter.

The Primary afforded that opportunity, and the Wards went four to one AGAINST the candidates who had taken the Smoyer position. In only one ward was such a candidate nominated, but no such job is being set up against him as Smoyer is attempting to put over against the Republican nominee in the First Ward.

Such is Smoyer's history and his ready inclination to shout fraud.

As has been said, in his present Democratic candidacy he offers no purpose that could be served by his election, and makes no pledges whatever that are of interest or concern to the First Ward. The only thing he makes entirely clear is the fact that if he were elected he would be in utter opposition to the Burgess and the assured majority in Council, which would make him an utterly futile and useless representative of the most important business section of the community.

Smoyer has given many startling examples of his utter irresponsibility in the matter of hurling reckless charges of dishonesty and fraud, but in no instance has he been more irresponsible than in his present desperate efforts to retain a public office which the members of his own party denied him in the Primary.

Had there been fraud in the Primary in the First Ward of a character or extent to change the Primary result, Smoyer would have taken the necessary steps long ago to have that result changed. The fact that he took no such effective steps is conclusive evidence that he knows the falsity of his own charges, and that they are mere political hokum put forth in an effort to persuade lifelong Republicans to desert their party in order to vote for him.

Republican Bristol asks the Republicans of the First Ward to stand by their party and its nominee, and thereby vindicate the spirit and purpose of the Primary, in the Election tomorrow.
